

Now, robot takes drink order via smartphone

ANI May 21, 2013, 04.27PM IST

Tags:

Smartphones | MIT | Google I/O conference | Google

Scientists have created a cocktail-making robot that can be controlled by smartphones.

Party attendees at the Google I/O Conference in San Francisco last week were invited to send a drink recipe via a smartphone application to a three-armed robot Makr Shakr.

They could then interact with attendees having similar taste to collaboratively design the perfect drink via social media. MIT's Senseable City Lab wanted to see what happened when a lot of people take control of an industrial manufacturing machine.

